AHA Lists Programs Scheduled for Annual Scientific Sessions

A wide range of programs focusing on cardiovascular research and medicine have been scheduled for the American Heart Association's 47th Annual Scientific Sessions, to be held November 18 through November 21 in Dallas, Texas. Program highlights are as follows:

Monday, November 18

Tuesday, November 19

Wednesday, November 20

Thursday, November 21

More than 500 papers based on original investigative work related to all areas of cardiovascular disease will be presented simultaneously through the sessions. A complete program listing all papers by title will be available in October. Program copies will be mailed to participants who register in advance.

Special Postgraduate Sessions organized by AHA's Scientific Councils have been scheduled for Tuesday evening, November 19. Cardiovascular Conferences and "How To" sessions will be held Wednesday evening for small group discussions of timely problems.

The 28th Annual Meeting of AHA's Council on Arteriosclerosis will be held November 18-20.

The AHA's Council on Thrombosis will present a National Conference on Thrombosis and Hemostasis November 20-22 in conjunction with the Scientific Sessions.

Pertinent new films on cardiovascular medicine will be presented. Scientific, industrial, and educational exhibits will be on display throughout the sessions.

For further information and advance registration forms, contact your local Heart Association or the AHA National Office, 44 East 23rd Street, New York, New York 10010.

Report Discusses Surgical Treatment of Hyperlipidemia

A report entitled "Surgical Treatment of Hyperlipidemia," (EM 262N) has been published by AHA as a supplement to the May 1974 issue of Circulation. This volume is based on ten years of clinical experience with the partial ileal bypass operation for management of the hyperlipidemias at the Department of Surgery and Medicine at the University of Minnesota Medical School, Minneapolis.
AMERICAN HEART ASSOCIATION

The authors, Henry Buchwald, M.D., Ph.D., Richard B. Moore, M.D., and Richard L. Varco, M.D., Ph.D., review past literature in this area and offer a comprehensive overview of the effective and safe means available to achieve lipid reduction. Copies may be obtained from local Heart Associations or the AHA National Office.

Deadline for 12th Annual Cochems Competition Announced

The University of Colorado School of Medicine has announced that all manuscripts submitted to the Twelfth Annual Jane Nugent Cochems Prize competition are due by November 30, 1974.

A prize of $2500 will be awarded to the author of the best paper in the field of “Thrombophlebitis and Basic Vascular Problems.” The basic vascular problems under consideration should be concerned with the underlying mechanisms or processes of vascular disease, particularly those associated with thrombosis, but not necessarily restricted to it.

The competition is open to all those holding the doctorate degree. Eligibility is limited to physicians who are subject to U.S. income tax regulations. Papers submitted to the competition may not be published until after the winner has been announced in early 1975.

For further information regarding the competition and manuscripts, contact: the Dean, School of Medicine, University of Colorado Medical Center, 4200 East Ninth Avenue, Denver, Colorado 80220.

AHA Publishes Reports of Annual Hypertension Research Proceedings

The proceedings of the annual two-day research sessions of the American Heart Association’s Council for High Blood Pressure Research are now available from AHA as a supplement to the May 1974 issue of Circulation Research.

This 225-page volume of the 1973 proceedings, “Hypertension, Vol. XXII, Peptide Lipids, Electrolytes and Hypertension,” (EM 334P) was edited by James C. Hunt, M.D.

Twenty-seven articles discuss recent investigations in peptides, lipids, and electrolytes and their relation to hypertension. While many of the reports are on the basic science level, they are all part of the effort by physicians to control the public health problem of high blood pressure.

The volume is available through local Heart Associations or AHA’s Distribution Department.
